Reference: (Author, Title, Pages) Shim, H., et al. CVIF–DLP Learning Activities

We all agree research is important to us – as an individual, as a community, as a nation, and as humankind! But can we think of more specifically how research impacts our lives? The following are some reasons why research is important to us.

As an individual

1) Research allows us to have a deeper understanding of nature.
2) Research changes and expands our point of view.

As a community

1) Research makes students more creative.
2) Research makes teachers more competent.

As a nation

1) Research results in higher standards of education.
2) Research results in economic growth and development.

As humankind

1) Research improves the quality of life.
2) Research solves problems the world faces.

Exercises: Answer in no more than one (1) complete sentence.

1) Write one more reason why research is important to us.
2) State one example or one specific situation where research solved a problem the world faced.
